About

Catherine, a self-taught, award-winning embroidery artist, shares a life with her devoted husband James for nearly 18 years, alongside raising two remarkable boys.
Oliver, forever 11 and Ethan, now 17.

Nestled in Leicestershire, Catherine pours passion into her craft, creating hyper-realistic embroidered art that unbeknownst to some, echoes the resilience of humanity.

Catherine's journey bears the weight of many trials. Each hardship leads her to find solace in her artistry, a means to navigate the complexities of child loss, disability, and mental health battles.

The loss of her cherished son Oliver, who had Down's syndrome and fought a valiant fight against Acute Lymphoblastic Leukaemia spanning nearly 8 years, left Catherine grappling with grief, yet once the grief cloud settled slightly after a few years, ignited a fire within her to create, to be able to move forward without ever leaving behind.

Also living with Ehlers-Danlos Syndrome and a myriad of chronic sometimes debilitating ailments, Catherine confronts adversity head-on, encapsulated by her logo, "Able" symbolizing her unwavering resolve to unearth her inner strength and to keep creating while she still can.

In her odyssey of self-discovery, Catherine's grayscale artwork mirrors her mental health journey, symbolizing the beauty of the grey amidst black and white thinking, echoing her belief that light emerges from darkness and without that darkness, there cannot be the light.

Each stitch bears testament: even in the depths of despair, beauty thrives, and hope endures.

Catherine's art transcends personal narrative, serving as a guiding light for those navigating their own labyrinth of triumphs, trials, and tribulations.
