
Your Britannica School subscription now includes CPD

The introduction of new technology into a school can be incredibly exciting for some but also a daunting prospect for others. Without staff receiving the necessary training, some of your pupils could miss out on the endless learning opportunities that come with Britannica School.

Three unique CPD accredited courses are included within your Britannica School subscription to ensure that your pupils and staff get the most out of the product.

Created by our Curriculum Specialists, a team who have first-hand classroom experience, these courses are tailored to demonstrate how Britannica School can support with common classroom difficulties, immense teacher workload and safe, secure researching.

The 30 minute sessions are available to book as live online webinars hosted by one of our Curriculum Specialists, and all teachers at your school are invited to join.

Britannica and Differentiation

Differentiation is key within any classroom to ensure that the needs of every pupil is matched. However, planning effective differentiation can be time consuming. This course offers an in-depth look at Britannica School's unique features that effectively support a range of Special Educational Needs such as EAL, MAT and General Learning Difficulties.

Britannica and Research Skills

As a globally recognised search engine, Britannica School are happy to offer this course to provide a simple structure for effective researching. This looks closely at the five stages of a research project and, importantly, how to recognise reliable sources online. Furthermore, it demonstrates how you can use the product to avoid plagiarism within your classroom.

Britannica and Teacher Support

Teachers' heavy workload is no secret. Supported by recognised research and studies, this course looks closely at a range of features which can support planning, lesson hooks, curriculum mapping and differentiation.
