What does it do?

CATWatch rids your property of cats, stopping them from killing birds and other such wildlife. It also stops them from digging and fouling on your property, keeping it how you like it.

Does it work? Can you prove it?

In 2002 CATWatch, the UK's leading cat deterrent, had successfully completed a two-year scientific trial by the RSPB to determine its deterrent effect on cats in residential gardens. 15 years later and our product is still proudly approved. The results are published in the Applied Animal Behaviour Science Journal after a peer review.

How long does the CATWatch take to work?

Reactions vary from immediate flight, to the animal walking towards the unit and settling down in front of it. The first is a timid cat; the second is a very territorial cat trying to assert its authority. In the end however the result is the same; both cats will avoid or quickly pass through the area you are protecting. This process normally takes between 2 to 4 weeks. However in extreme cases it can take up to 3 months. Deaf cats or some exotic breeds will not be affected.

How does it work?

CATWatch actually trains cats to stay away from your garden. CATWatch does this by emitting a unique ultrasonic alarm, triggered by the cat's movement of body heat as soon as it enters the protected area. Unlike other cat deterrents that simply emit a random or permanent ultrasound signal regardless of whether a cat is present, CATWatch only deters when a cat is present. This saves battery power and electricity costs. One CATWatch will protect an area of up to 1,345 sq. ft. – up to twice the area of other makes.

Does it work in all weather conditions?

CATWatch is designed to run trouble free all year round and in most weather conditions from -20° to + 40° with simple maintenance e.g. if the device is covered in snow, the sensor will need to be cleared of it. The low voltage computer controlled micro circuitry is completely sealed inside the unit. This means that in the unlikely event of water getting inside the product, it will still continue to function and be absolutely safe to touch. It should not be submerged in water.
