AMETHYST Hardness: 7 Chemical Composition: SiO<sub>2</sub> Crystal System: Hexagonal Chemical Classification: Silicon Dioxide Origin: Brazil, Bolivia, Mexico, Africa, Canada, Russia, the USA and Europe Amethyst colour varies from pale to deep purple. It is derived from a combination of trace amounts of iron and aluminium, plus natural or applied irradiation. Amethyst has been prized for its beauty for thousands of years. Early Greek and Roman societies placed high value on amethyst, and it has long been viewed as a stone of royalty.	BLACK OBSIDIAN Hardness: 5-5.5 Chemical Composition: SiO<sub>2</sub> Crystal System: Amorphous Chemical Classification: Silicon Dioxide Origin: Argentina, Armenia, Azerbaijan, Australia, Canada, Chile, Georgia, Greece, El Salvador, Guatemala, Iceland, Italy, Japan, Kenya, Mexico, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Scotland, Turkey and the USA Obsidian can be found in locations which have experienced rhyolitic eruptions. Obsidian has been used for making arrow heads and other tools since Palaeolithic times. The name obsidian is derived from the name of the prominent ancient Roman Obsis.	BLOODSTONE Hardness: 6.5-7 Chemical Composition: SiO<sub>2</sub> Crystal System: Hexagonal Chemical Classification: Silicate Origin: India, China, Brazil, Australia and the USA Bloodstone is a variety of opaque chalcedony. It is generally dark green with red spots or blotches. Bloodstone is also known as heliotrope. From the Greek for 'sun turner', although the derivation of this name is not known. In the Middle Ages, the red spots in bloodstone were thought to represent the spots of Christ's blood, and special magical powers were attributed to the stones.
BLUE LACE AGATE Hardness: 7 Chemical Composition: SiO<sub>2</sub> Crystal System: Hexagonal Chemical Classification: Silicate Origin: South Africa and Romania Blue lace agate is banded in intricate patterns of light blue and white. The name agate comes from the river Achates in Sicily where agates were found in ancient times.	BRONZITE Hardness: 5.5 Chemical Composition: (Mg,Fe)SiO<sub>3</sub> Crystal System: Orthorhombic Chemical Classification: Silicate Origin: India, Russia, Brazil and China Bronzite is a bronze-like sub-metallic lustre variety of enstatite. Bronzite is a golden-brown colour that shimmers in the light. Ancient Romans made use of bronzite to protect themselves from mental illness. This variety of enstatite has a semi-metallic lustre which is formed through weathering of the enstatite mineral. Bronzite consists of magnesium and iron silicate. These are considered to be the terrestrial variety of enstatite.	CARNELIAN Hardness: 7 Chemical Composition: SiO<sub>2</sub> Crystal System: Trigonal Chemical Classification: Silicate Origin: India, Brazil and Uruguay Carnelian is an orange-coloured variety of chalcedony and mineral in the quartz family. Carnelian's colour can vary from pale orange to deep orange-red, sometimes with shades of banding. In ancient times, carnelian was believed to give the wearer courage in battle.
CITRINE Hardness: 7 Chemical Composition: SiO<sub>2</sub> Crystal System: Hexagonal Chemical Classification: Silicon Dioxide Origin: Deposits of natural citrine have been found in Brazil, Africa, Madagascar, Spain, Russia, France and the USA Citrine is a silicon dioxide mineral and a member of the quartz group. Citrine comes from the French word 'citrin', meaning lemon. Citrine was used in Greece as far back as 300 BC and was worked into cabochon ring stones and pendants in Greece and Rome through the first and second centuries AD.	CLEAR QUARTZ Hardness: 7 Chemical Composition: SiO<sub>2</sub> Crystal System: Trigonal Chemical Classification: Silicate Origin: Worldwide Clear quartz is also known as rock crystal. The word crystal comes from the Greek for ice since the Greeks thought that clear quartz was solidified water. Quartz is used nowadays in most watches and clocks as a regulator.	FLUORITE Hardness: 4 Chemical Composition: CaF<sub>2</sub> Crystal System: Isometric Chemical Classification: Halide Origin: Germany, England, China, Argentina and the USA Fluorite is a calcium fluoride crystal. It can be found in a wide range of colours. Fluorite has lent its name to the property of fluorescence: the display of vivid glowing colours under ultraviolet light.
GREEN AVENTURINE Hardness: 7 Chemical Composition: SiO<sub>2</sub> Crystal System: Hexagonal Chemical Classification: Silicate Origin: Major deposits of aventurine are found in Brazil, India and Russia Aventurine is found primarily in three colours: green, blue and red-brown. The green colour comes from microscopic fuchsite particles within quartz. Aventurine was originally an accidental discovery made by Venetian glass workers during the 18th century. The name 'aventurine' was derived from the Italian words 'la' and 'ventura', which mean 'by chance'.	HEMATITE Hardness: 5-8 Chemical Composition: Fe<sub>2</sub>O<sub>3</sub> Crystal System: Trigonal Chemical Classification: Oxide Origin: Worldwide - finer grades are found in Brazil Hematite is an iron oxide mineral. Its name derives from the Greek word for blood, a reference to the colour of this mineral and is the major mineral in most iron ore deposits.	JADE Hardness: 6.5-7 Chemical Composition: NaAlSi<sub>3</sub>O<sub>8</sub> Crystal System: Monoclinic Chemical Classification: Silicate Origin: Burma, Guatemala, Russia, California and Japan The toughness of jade made it a favoured stone for tools of primitive people, and it was used to make axes, clubs and knives.

Natural Gems
ONYX

Hardness: 7 Chemical Composition:  $\text{SiO}_2$
 Crystal System: Hexagonal Chemical Classification: Silicate
 Origin: Brazil, India and California

Onyx is a variety of chalcedony, a member of the quartz family. Black onyx is most often made by dyeing grey chalcedony in various ways. The name comes from the Greek word 'onyx', which means 'nail of a finger or claw'. Legend says that one day while Venus was sleeping, Eros/Cupid cut her fingernails and left the clippings scattered on the ground; and because no part of a heavenly body can die, the Gods turned them into stone which later became known as onyx.
