About Ben

Ben Goymour is an Army veteran who served in 29 Commando Regiment. After leaving the Army, he worked as a builder and carpenter, spending as much time as possible outdoors hiking and wild camping across the UK. Time in nature became an important escape from his struggles as a veteran.

In 2017, following a trip to the Lake District, Ben wanted to buy a piece of art to remind him of how he felt up on the fells. Unable to find anything that truly captured that feeling, and even if he had, he couldn't have afforded it, he decided to learn to paint for himself.

Entirely self-taught, what began as a personal challenge quickly became a daily practice and then a full-time pursuit. Ben's work has since developed into a style he describes as Emotive Realism, with a focus on light and the emotional experience of a place or the spirit of an animal.

Today, Ben is represented by award-winning high street galleries across the UK, with his work collected by a wide and growing audience. His paintings span coastal landscapes, woodland scenes, expressive wildlife, and cityscapes, offering variety while remaining cohesive in tone and quality.

This catalogue presents a curated selection of Ben's limited edition print collections, all hand-signed, professionally framed, and limited to editions of 50. Each piece is reproduced from his original paintings using high-quality fine art canvas on board, with meticulous colour matching to the original artwork, making them remarkably difficult to tell apart. Selected for their strong appeal within independent retail and gallery environments, the collections are designed to be easy to display, straightforward to reorder, and consistent in quality.
