PENTA'S STORY

THE CORE VALUES OF THE FAMILY FARM ARE IMPORTANT TO PENTA'S PEOPLE, AND ARE KEPT CLOSE TO THE HEART OF EVERY DECISION WE MAKE.

Penta comes from a long history of farming and farm equipment, early on at a local level, and more recently spreading across North America and internationally.

As a company, Penta entered the farm industry in the 1970's through sales and service of dairy equipment, particularly feeding and milking equipment.

In the early 1990's, Penta added TMR mixer lines to their sales lineup, selling and servicing mixers in the local market. Throughout that time, personnel at Penta were responsible for rebuilding all makes and models of mixers, and the understanding of the workings of a TMR mixer grew substantially.

In 2000, the production of the first Penta mixer began, with the first models available in early 2001. Over the course of the next decade, the Penta mixer line experienced many changes and improvements, including two unique auger systems and an increase in the sizes and models available. During this time the company expanded its reach into international markets, and moved its TMR production facilities to Petrolia, Ontario.

In September 2012, Penta introduced forage dump trailers to our product line, as part of our ongoing effort to provide farmers with strong and efficient equipment to improve their farms and their business. Further developments in 2015 included the purchase of Hagedorn and, one year later, the integration of this to the Penta production line.

As individuals, the ownership and many of the staff at Penta come from a background of farming, and many continue to participate in farming today. The values of the family farm are important to Penta as a company, and are kept close to the heart of every decision we make and challenge we face going forward into the future.
