

FUTURE POLICING

PART OF

HALL 5 | NEC | BIRMINGHAM | 23-24 SEPTEMBER 2020

> Future Policing at The Emergency Services Show

The Emergency Services Show recognises the strategic pitch of policing and also the current challenges and opportunities which the police service faces along with their key emergency services partners.

The Home Office has launched a national campaign to recruit 20,000 additional police officers. An initial cohort of 6,000 officers will be recruited in the first year, with the remaining 14,000 recruited over two years. This increased workforce, along with equipping our police with emerging technologies to enable them to keep our communities safer, creates huge sales opportunities for suppliers.

> That's why we are delighted to introduce Future Policing at The Emergency Services Show 2020 which takes place from 23-24 September at the NEC Birmingham.

The founding essence of The Emergency Services Show remains as a truly multi-agency collaborative event, bringing together key decision-makers from throughout the police, fire and rescue, and ambulance services plus voluntary organisations such as the RNLI, Mountain Rescue and other partners. Future Policing at ESS2020 will showcase a 2-day CPD-accredited conference to unite Home Office, policymakers and Government Think Tanks with operational stakeholders and the private sector to tackle a policing model out-paced by technology.

Surrounded by an exhibition of the most innovative technology including mobile technology, AI, facial recognition, body-worn tech, digital forensics, through to connected vehicles, digitally-enabled officers, kit & boots, plus training, The Emergency Services Show continues to provide a powerful platform bringing together all operational and procurement personnel who are part of the decision-making process.

Being part of Future Policing at The Emergency Services Show 2020 will put you in front of the decision makers for your products and services throughout the whole of the blue light sector.
