About Jane Buurman Handmade

We are a small family run business based near Bath, born from Jane's love of sewing. Jane spends many happy hours making the original free-motion embroidery designs. She incorporates paper, fabric, paint and other materials to create texture and colour, then stitches the detail freehand using her sewing machine. Once finished the designs are sent to our UK printers to be made into beautiful greeting cards. We use gorgeous quality textured board stock, the stitching detail is so clear you can almost feel it! Some of Jane's designs are hand finished with jewels to give them that extra sparkle.

Designed and printed in the UK on premium quality, FSC approved textured board and come with a recycled Fleck Craft Envelope. The cards are blank inside and individually wrapped with a cello bag as standard. Nested or with clasp also available.

A Design in the Making

Tiger

People love seeing our original artwork; it helps them understand the free-motion embroidery element of the designs. So much detail goes into our designs and the free-motion embroidery is the final stage before the designs are scanned and prepared for printing. The stitched element is most obvious on the reverse of the artwork where you can only see the sewing, not the entire design. When you see the back of the artwork, you can really appreciate how much sewing has gone into every design and people find this fascinating.

The Tiger was painted first in watercolour and pen. Then more detail was added using free motion embroidery.
