WAX

MINERAL WAX

The standard wax we use in our candles is a blend of mineral and vegetable wax which has been developed over many years by a leading premium candle wax manufacturer. This wax blend is refined to the highest possible standards of purity and is not hazardous to health, nor does it pose any adverse effects to the environment, and is also considered vegan. Paraffin wax is the most common wax type used in candle-making; this is because it is easy to work with, colourless, odourless and provides a better scent throw than most other waxes.

NATURAL WAX

For selected fragrances we can offer a natural wax. The natural wax we use is a blend of soy and rapeseed products, coconut and beeswax. Unlike mineral wax, our natural wax is made from renewable sources.

Points to consider with natural wax:

- Although the wax is natural, it is not considered vegan as it contains beeswax.
- Natural waxes tend to have a good cold & hot throw fragrance release. However, the burn performance is not as consistent as a mineral wax due to the molecular structure of the wax.
- A larger wick is needed with natural wax so there is an increased chance of the wick sooting and clubbing. Regular wick trimming can help with this.
- Mottling is a common occurrence with natural wax when used in a clear glass. For this reason we only provide natural wax in decorated glass.

FRONT LABELS

WARNING LABELS

At Lower Lodge Candles, we take care of all the regulatory labelling to ensure that your product is compliant. It is our obligation to ensure that the products we produce comply with certain standards and regulations, so that they are ready to be sold by our customers.

These regulations are met by including warning labels on both the bottom of the product vessel and on the product's packaging.

All we require from you, in order to adhere to the regulations is:

- Your business name
- Business address

- Website

WE ADHERE TO TWO MAIN REGULATIONS FOR CANDLE LABELLING:

EU Standards - EN 15494

This includes information about directions for product use and candle care. This is in the form of pictograms or text if space allows.

CLP Regulation (classification, labelling & packaging) - EC 1272/2008

Also targeting the EU market, this includes information on the product's chemical ingredients and any associated hazards and warnings. CLP Regulation also stipulates that other information must be included on safety labels, such as the product name or description (product identifier), the product fill-weight and the contact details of the supplier.

BOTANICAL CANDLE CARE

Due to the individuality of these unique handmade candles, extra care should be taken when burning and maintaining. To ensure you get the best out of your botanical candle, please follow the guidance below.

- Trim each wick to 5mm before lighting and again each time before re-lighting.
- Each time the candle is used it should be lit and allowed to burn for a minimum of two hours. If burning a multi-wick, ensure each wax pool has joined before extinguishing.
- Burn for a maximum of four hours on each occasion. The diameter of the burn pool will expand as the candle burns down.
- The outer wall of the candle is made from harder wax due to the botanical elements. This means only the inner core will melt, so a tunnelling effect is completely normal.
- It is extremely important that no part of the candle is close to another heat source i.e. a radiator, open fire, direct sunlight or another candle; as this may cause uneven burning and weakening of that section of the candle wall.
- This candle has been designed and manufactured with a harder wax base and should be extinguished approximately 15mm from the bottom. This is to prevent leakage and ensure fire safety.
