Salon Provence

Henri Fabre and his daughter, Marie-Hélène Bousquet-Fabre 2nd and 3rd generation.

Since 1900 and for four generations here in Salon-de-Provence, the Fabre family has kept TRADITIONAL CRAFT SKILLS alive making Marseille soap and black soap with olive oil.

OUR TRADE SECRET is a warrant of a natural soap that is healthy for people and for the environment.

We're proud to follow on in the footsteps of our great-grandfather, MARIUS FABRE, whose adventure began in 1900.

By our side in this adventure, a team of 40 people works everyday WITH PASSION right near the cauldrons and huge floor slab moulds of the Marius Fabre soap factory to contribute to its reputation and that of MARSEILLE SOAP.”

THE STORY OF A FAMILY in Provence

Julie and Marie, Marius Fabre's great granddaughters, took over the family business in 2010. Between traditions and innovation, they champion unique craft skills taking Marseille soap well beyond their home frontiers.

1900

CREATION OF THE COMPANY

The 22-year-old Marius Fabre set up his soap factory in Salon-de-Provence. He worked in the shed at the bottom of his garden, fitting it out with two cauldrons and a few drying moulds.

Great economic prosperity was now the trend in Salon-de-Provence thanks to the production and sale of olive oil, Marseille soap and coffee boosted by the arrival of the railway in 1873.

OFF TO THE WAR

Called up at the very beginning of the war, Marius left his wife, Mary, in charge of the company. For four long years, with the help of an old Italian foreman, she ran the soap-making activities and sales.

NEW PREMISES

Thanks to its success, the Marius Fabre soap factory moved into larger premises to accommodate the huge vats it needed for saponification and is still there today. Manufacturing more and more soap, the company expanded.

1938

THE SECOND GENERATION

Fernand, Marius' eldest son, took over the soap factory from his father. But the Second World War broke out bringing a severe shortage of raw materials.

1960

A NEW LEASE OF LIFE

The Marius Fabre soap factory bought the famous brand "La Sainte Famille" from Roux in Marseille, giving it a new lease of life.

1973

HARD TIMES

In 1973, it was the turn of Henri, Marius Fabre's youngest son, to take the reins of the family business. The times were hard; Marseille soap found itself up against fierce competition from petroleum-based products. Habits changed and so did the customers.

1987

THE THIRD GENERATION

Henri passed the baton to his youngest daughter, Marie-Hélène, who had already been working along-side him for several years, and his son-in-law, Robert Bousquet. The return to nature and authenticity was a promise of better days for Marseille soap. Exports grew as a result of enthusiasm for an internationally renowned product.

THE ADVENTURE GOES ON WITH HIS GREAT-GRANDDAUGHTER

It is with the same passion that Marius' great-grand-daughters, Marie and Julie Bousquet-Fabre, continue the family adventure. Today 40 people work at the soap factory and the team includes about as many sales representatives and distributors in France and abroad.

2020

AN INNOVATION FOR THE 120TH ANNIVERSARY

In response to a major environmental issue and after 8 years of research, Marie and Julie succeeded in removing palm oil from all Marius Fabre soaps.

UNIQUE, AGE-OLD CRAFTSMANSHIP

Marius Fabre Marseille soap is the handiwork of a traditional soap-making process. It is still cooked in cauldrons and left to dry in the north wind, the Mistral. It takes fourteen days to make it, using only vegetable oils, among them the olive oil that is so precious. The workers at the Marius Fabre soap factory today still make soap to the rules set by Louis XIV, the Sun King.

Stage 1

THE FIRST CHANGE KNOWN AS SAPONIFICATION

The vegetable oils and caustic soda are mixed in a huge cauldron holding up to 20 metric tons of raw materials. Thanks to the soda and the heat, the oils gradually turn into soap paste. The chemical reaction is known as saponification and is sometimes referred to as the "first change".

Stage 2

SALTING OUT (OR WASHING)

The soap paste is washed several times in salt water to eliminate the remains of the soda.

Stage 3

COOKING

It is heated to a temperature of 100°C and cooked for ten days. The cauldron fires are lit in the morning and put out at night.

Stage 4

PURIFICATION

The soap paste is washed several times to purify it, removing glycerol, impurities and non-saponified fatty acids.

Stage 5

FINISHING

To get rid of all the impurities left in the soap paste, it is rinsed several times in clear water, hence the "Extra Pur" appellation.

All of these stages form a phase known as "la cuite" or the hot process.

It is delicate and decisive in the soap-making process and demands the full attention and expertise of the master soap-maker.

Stage 6

CASTING THE BATCH OF SOAP

While it is still hot, the soap paste is poured into huge floor slab moulds.

Stage 7

DRYING

48 hours in the open air. But faster if the Mistral wind is blowing!

Stage 8

CUTTING

When it is dry, the soap, still in the floor moulds, is cut into 30 kg loafs using a winch-drawn cutter. Then each loaf of soap is machine-cut into different sized blocks.

Stage 9

STAMPING

Soap bars are hand-stamped and cubes are machine-moulded to stamp them. All six sides of the soap cubes are engraved with the traditional "savon de Marseille" prints.

THE REAL MARSEILLE SOAP

How to recognize it?

This logo is the guarantee of an authentic Marseille soap, manufactured according to three essential criteria, defined by the Union des Professionnels du Savon de Marseille – UPSM, the Marseille soap-makers' alliance*:

SOAP COMPOSITION

Made 100% from vegetable oils, no added fragrance, no colouring, no preservatives.

MANUFACTURING PROCESS

The "Marseille process" where the soap is cooked in cauldrons for 10 days or so respects 5 specific stages of manufacturing.

GEOGRAPHICAL ORIGIN

Made in the historic Marseille soap-making area: the Marseille region, which nowadays corresponds to the Bouches-du-Rhône department (13).

TO RECOGNIZE AN AUTHENTIC MARSEILLE SOAP THANKS TO THESE THREE CRITERIA AND READ THE LABEL CAREFULLY TO CHECK ITS COMPOSITION.

* The Marius Fabre Soap Factory is one of the four founding members of the Union des Professionnels du Savon de Marseille, a non-profit organisation created in 2011 to safeguard and promote traditional Marseille soap. The Marius Fabre Soap Factory has been Chair since its creation.

A STRONG COMMITMENT to the environment

On the occasion of its 120th anniversary, after 8 years of research, tests and investments, Marius Fabre innovates and succeeds in removing palm oil from all its soaps and replacing it with a very special oil: oleic sunflower oil.

Eliminate palm oil, a commitment to the environment

By eliminating palm oil from its soap, Marius Fabre soap factory wants to eliminate the use of a raw material whose cultivation has been responsible for the deforestation of millions of hectares of tropical forests for several decades.

In addition to the damage to biodiversity, with the disappearance of emblematic plant and animal species, the exponential development of oil palm cultivation is sustainably degrading the planet's last green lungs.

This innovation is in line with the philosophy of the Marius Fabre soap factory since 1900: manufacturing natural products, respectful of man and the environment.

8 years of research to replace palm oil

In 2020, Marius Fabre innovated and succeeded in removing palm oil from all its soaps and replacing it with a very special oil, oleic sunflower oil.

The development of the new formula required 8 years of research, testing and investment. Marius Fabre thus became the first soap maker to manufacture all its Marseille soaps completely free of palm oil, while preserving the quality of the soap and the traditional manufacturing process.

Oleic sunflower oil, an oil with many virtues

Oleic sunflower is a variety of sunflower very rich in oleic acid. Replacing palm oil with oleic sunflower oil means choosing a more sustainable oil, since the cultivation of sunflower does not consume natural areas, but only areas already cultivated.

Moreover, the oleic sunflower selected by Marius Fabre is harvested in France and in Europe, thus reducing the transport distances of this raw material. The seeds of this sunflower are entirely refined in France, less than 200 km from Salon-de-Provence, to produce oleic sunflower oil.

In addition to its environmental benefits, the use of this new vegetable oil makes it possible to obtain cubes and bar of soaps that are even more nourishing and moisturising for the skin. Oleic sunflower oil has a specificity: its composition is very similar to that of olive oil.

In fact, the oleic fatty acid that makes up 80% of oleic sunflower oil is the same as that in olive oil. Oleic sunflower oil is therefore rich in Omega 9 and in vitamin E, a natural antioxidant, providing nourishing and protective properties for the skin.

soap is palm oil free ”

SOLVENT-FREE

Natural soap paste scrub with olive oil and crushed olive stones

Removes all paint, sludge and grease marks.

This soap, made from Marius Fabre's speciality, olive oil black soap, is an innovative product because it is made of vegetable ingredients only. It differs from all the so-called "mechanical" soaps, which are always made with petroleum-based surfaces and solvents.

With its added crushed olive stones, this soap does not damage but cleans hands thoroughly, and not only that, it leaves them really soft. It also preserves the environment as it is entirely biodegradable.

Use: take a small amount of soap, wet your hands and rub energetically. Rinse.

Composition: soap made with olive-pomace oil, crushed olive stones, glycerine.

NO PARABEN

Repair cream with essential oils

Quickly relieves hands.

Helps prevent rough, dry skin.

This cream is ideal for very damaged hands after gardening, DIY, mechanical work, etc. Its rich composition with olive oil and shea butter puts the moisture back into dry skin and its essential oils of lavender, camphor from China and marigold soothe with their anti-inflammatory and antiseptic properties. This cream contains no synthetic preservatives (paraben) and no colouring agents.

Use: After washing your hands thoroughly with liquid soap or soap paste scrub, wipe them dry and apply the cream. Massage until it soaks in. Suitable for daily use.

Composition: organic olive oil, shea butter, essential oils of lavender and Chinese camphor, marigold plant extract. No paraben.
