

Commander Del McKnight RN

Children played with unexploded bomb at Rosemarkie
© 23 February 2017 Highlands & Islands

Children played with an unexploded mortar bomb on a beach before being was.

The beach at Rosemarkie in the Highlands was closed to the public on Tuesday the discovery.

A Royal Navy bomb disposal team from HMS Clyde at Faslane disposed of the thought to be from World War Two, on Wednesday evening.

Lt Cmdr Tony Hampshire said the coastguard had told the team children had with the device.

The Royal Navy officer said: "Despite its era the explosive was probably intact dangerous. These devices should be treated with respect."
