LEARNING/ TRAINING IN TIME OF COVID

Lizzie Rhodes James: Is the what now ever going to happen? Are we not continually moving?

Kemi: whilst we might be at the "what now" stage... most people are like asking but how? how are we going to do this learning thing during these unprecedented times

Wendy Arrowsmith: @clairepegg - I work for North Yorkshire County Council and we are now doing much of our training via webinars which is a whole new training dimension for us as trainers

IMPACTED ROI

Rachael: also impacts ROI when we have less delegates

Wendy Arrowsmith: We are looking at adapting our classroom training from 16 delegates to

Kemi: @Wendyarrowsmith how are you finding the transition- from 16 to 6. why did you choose 6 as a number?

BLENDED LEARNING

Nick Denholm: huge opportunity for virtual learning journeys mixing live sessions with social and off-line elements

Karen Chambers: Like the mix of online learning first, then smaller workshops

Martin Baker: flipped classroom = blended?

FLIPPED CLASSROOM - Done

Nishath: @Carrie- what was your experience with Flip?

Carrie (@CarrieAWalton): Although trying to get practitioners to realise the difference between flipped and blended is a surprising struggle...

Helen dudfield: flipped combined with adaptive learning is powerful

Helen dudfield: so, we can use flipped for recruits before they arrive on a course

Helen dudfield: then focus face to face

DIGITAL USER EXPERIENCE

Kemi: What I find interesting is that there is lack of understanding or limited understanding on how to design learning, content and the experience, particularly the digital experience. I'm finding I'm working more with L&D professionals on this more than other training topics..looking at digital design design thinking, content design etc

ADAPTIVE LEARNING

Helen dudfield: anyone using adaptive yet?

TOOLS

Helen dudfield: look at CogBooks or area9 as examples

andy wooler: @Helen - my last employers use the Area9 Adaptive learning tool to great effect

PHASE 3 - DONE

Rachael: what was phase 3 referred to again?

Kemi: What I find interesting is that there is lack of understanding or limited understanding on how to design learning, content and the experience, particularly the digital experience. I'm finding I'm working more with L&D professionals on this more than other training topics..looking at digital design design thinking, content design etc
