Why this matters

With tariffs and trade rules shifting rapidly, especially following new developments between the U.S. and China, franchise businesses face ongoing uncertainty in cross-border sourcing and supply chains. U.S. policy decisions can also affect other jurisdictions indirectly, making localized legal and tax advice essential when planning expansion or adjusting your supplier base.

High-growth franchises need smart sourcing strategies and market entry plans to protect margins and maintain agility.

What your business can do now

Explore Alternative Supply Markets

Local AGA offices can help you identify lower-tariff sourcing opportunities in, for example:

Southeast Asia
(Vietnam, Thailand)

Eastern Europe
(Poland, Turkey)

Central America
(Costa Rica, Colombia)

In many jurisdictions, local AGA offices can also assist in identifying trusted suppliers, logistics partners, and franchise-supporting vendors to help you build efficient, compliant supply chains from day one.
