IN CONVERSATION

As the world transitions to working-from-home setups due to the pandemic, cyber threats have surged exponentially.

Governments and organisations in Southeast Asia are buckling up to prevent further attacks in their cyber defences. Partnerships and resource allocation are parts of the solution, as countries have been ramping up their cyber and data security capabilities recognising the stakes that come with lowered defences. In the same way, organisations, like Singtel, CrowdStrike, and LogRhythm, acknowledge how cybersecurity awareness helps mitigate the risks posed by remote working, and understand how investment plays a key role in strengthening cybersecurity measures.
