

Advice, Networking and the launch of the 2025 Design Competition

3pm, 20th May - Hansgrohe's student focused event at Clerkenwell Design Week provides the ideal location for students to kick start their career with help from bathroom design experts

As part of its packed programme during Clerkenwell Design Week, Hansgrohe has dedicated the first afternoon of events to helping give those coming through into the industry the tools they need to succeed in the industry.

From 3pm onwards on Tuesday 20th May, the Hansgrohe Water Studio will be opening its doors to students, people new to the sector and those hoping to make even more of their passion for design, with a view to helping set them on the right career path.

Setting the challenge to budding designers, the afternoon will see the launch of the 2025 AXOR Student Design competition. Open to current interior design students and those who have graduated within the past three years, it aims to inspire the next generation of creative interior design talent and help shape the future of luxury bathrooms and follows the success of the inaugural year in 2024, which drew high calibre entries and recognition from across the industry.

The afternoon event will also include a session on interview techniques plus valuable CV and portfolio advice delivered by leading architects from the area, followed by a networking session led by business development experts, Always Thinking.

Hansgrohe is renowned for working with designers, and the day will be rounded off by a keynote speaker offering their design inspiration and advice before the afternoon closes at around 7pm.

Refreshments will be available throughout.
