This Clerkenwell Design Week sixteen3 unveils Otto, a sofa range designed to redefine modern comfort whilst drawing upon design principles from the past. Designed as a nod to one of the most influential design movements of the 20th Century, Otto echoes the principles of the Bauhaus movement. Emphasising beauty in simplicity and function, Otto is a comfortable and minimalist range of armchairs, sofas, and modular components, allowing the freedom to construct expansive and refined seating layouts.

Inspired by the iconic early 20th Century Bauhaus principles which revolutionized the way we think about design, Otto is a classic sofa designed for bustling modern workspaces. Its cubic structure is accentuated by clean lines and angular backrests, seamlessly blended with soft, curved upholstery to deliver enhanced comfort and unparalleled elegance. This range offers a refined simplicity and timeless aesthetic, creating a harmonious ambience in any setting.

One of the standout features of Otto is its extensive modular capability, allowing for effortless customization and adaptability. The range includes armchairs, two and three-seat sofas, modules with or without arms, and various width options. Providing limitless possibilities for diverse compositions. In both small spaces and vast open floor plans, Otto can effortlessly adapt to meet the unique requirements of any environment.

Designed with both practicality and luxury in mind, Otto boasts a compact footprint without compromising on style or comfort. Its soft form provides a light and weightless impression, while the curvaceous back and armrests add a touch of distinction. Slender steel legs provide sturdy support whilst giving a light, effortless, and almost floating appearance. Available in a wide range of RAL colours, the legs can be customized to suit individual preferences and design schemes.

"We are excited to introduce Otto, a product that exemplifies the contemporary lifestyle and our commitment to exceptional design," said Managing Director, Paul Chamberlain. "With its harmonious balance of form and function, Otto has a modern style and timeless appeal. It is a testament to the fact that simplicity and luxury can coexist, providing utmost comfort without compromising on aesthetics."

Otto represents a refined collection that captures the essence of classic design while adding a touch of lightness and exquisite attention to detail. Its understated elegance makes Otto an ideal choice for various environments, from modern workplaces and offices to sophisticated residential spaces.
