Where Colour, Material and Smart Technology Meet: Bisley Showcases The Layers of Design at Clerkenwell Design Week 2026

At Clerkenwell Design Week 2026, Bisley will present as the Bisley Group, moving confidently beyond its steel heritage into a broader portfolio of intelligent storage, soft seating and furniture solutions for contemporary workplace and home interiors.

With a refreshed showroom in the heart of Clerkenwell, Bisley's showcase explores The Layers of Design. A place where colour, material and smart technology come together to shape environments that balance practicality with expressive, considered design.

Introducing Emerald: A Vivid Versatile Hue

A key moment for the brand will be the introduction of Emerald, a rich, jewel-toned green joining Bisley's curated colour palette. The launch reflects the company's ongoing exploration of colour as a defining element in both workplace and residential interiors.

Associated with balance, restoration and focus, green has become an increasingly influential tone in contemporary workspace design. Emerald brings depth and sophistication to Bisley's colour offering, reinforcing the brand's belief that colour can play a powerful role in shaping how environments feel and function.

BISLEY

A New Material Language

Alongside the colour launch, visitors will experience a refreshed material direction throughout the showroom. New textures, finishes and tonal combinations will be introduced across the Bisley collection, reflecting a more layered and tactile approach to workplace interiors.

This evolving material palette builds on ideas that were first teased on the Bisley stand earlier this year at the Workspace Design Show in London, introducing earthy, rich tones and on-trend metallics, and expanding on the brand's exploration of surfaces and detail as central components of its design language.

The BeSmart® Innovation Hub

Technology takes centre stage with the debut of the BeSmart Innovation Hub, a dedicated environment exploring Bisley's expanding smart locker and intelligent storage ecosystem.

For Clerkenwell Design Week, the event space at the rear of the showroom will be transformed from floor to ceiling into a purpose-built experience centre dedicated to smart storage and workplace technology. The space will bring together the full BeSmart offering, demonstrating how connected storage solutions can support flexible, modern workplaces.

Warren: Storage Designed for a Busy Home

The showroom revamp will also include the recent launch of Warren, a new hallway furniture collection available through the Bisley Shop and showcased within the showroom's Home Space.

Designed to bring Bisley's thoughtful approach to practical storage into residential interiors, the collection reflects the growing crossover between home styling and functional organisation. Presented within the dedicated Home setting in the showroom, the range demonstrates how Bisley continues to diversify and transforming its design expertise in storage into contemporary home solutions, combining playful, colourful steel elements with considered everyday wood finishes to create a functional, design-led home collection.

Fern Peek: A Playful Home Installation

Within the Home Space, the newly released Fern Peek collection will be transformed into a colourful candy shop installation, creating a playful moment within the showroom. Visitors will be able to experience the new Fern Peek Maxi cupboard alongside the Fern Peek Stendi, showcasing the range's distinctive reeded windows and bold use of colour.

Bisley x Thomas Montgomery

Completing the showcase is an expanded presence of seating from partner Thomas Montgomery, strengthening the collaboration across the Bisley Group and introducing a broader furniture offering within the redesigned showroom, highlighting Bisley's ability to design across the entire floorplate.

Together, these elements reflect a company in motion, one that continues to build on decades of manufacturing expertise.
