L-leucine - inhibits the action of cortisol, which is a hormone that intensifies breakdown, affects the optimal concentration of growth hormone, improves the processes of obtaining energy in the muscles. L-valine also affects the level and relations of the neurotransmitters, which results in a gentle stimulating effect (postpones the occurrence of fatigue durning exercise). L-isoleucine works as an anti-catabolic and regulates the level of sugar in the blood.

L-CARNITINE - improves metabolism of fats, contributes to the increased use of fats and leads to an increase in body energy production. Thanks to this function, the increase of L-carnitine in the body may contribute to unhiging or reducing the formation of adipose tissue and improve exercise tolerance.

CAFFEINE - effectively adds more energy before physical exercise. By affecting the nervous system, it also increases body efficiency and motivates for further effort. As a result it improves reflexes and sharpens concentration.
