The co-location of EMS Asia 2026 with The Emergency Services Show Asia 2026 will create a single, integrated platform bringing together EMS, fire and rescue, disaster response, public safety, and communications. This unified approach provides unparalleled opportunities for knowledge sharing, innovation, and cross-border collaboration among industry professionals. Attendees can also look forward to live demonstrations, skills competitions, and an expanded conference programme, including the Emergency Services Leaders' Summit, showcasing the latest advancements and fostering engagement across the entire emergency services ecosystem.

Tristan Norman, Group Managing Director, Nineteen APAC, commented: "This partnership with the College of Emergency Physicians represents a significant step in advancing the emergency services ecosystem across Asia and beyond. By co-locating with EMS Asia, we are not only uniting the full spectrum of emergency response professionals, but also creating a platform where high-quality content, thought leadership, and community engagement converge. This collaboration enables meaningful knowledge sharing, fosters innovation, and strengthens cross-border networks, ensuring that both events deliver lasting value to the entire emergency services community.

A/Prof Ng Yih Yng, Chair, Section of Emergency Medical Services Physicians, College of Emergency Medicine Physicians, commented: "This year, AAEMS is pleased to host the 8th edition of EMS Asia alongside the inaugural The Emergency Services Show Asia in partnership with Nineteen APAC. The co-location of the events offers delegates a robust scientific programme and the opportunity to share new innovations and practical know-how across the wider EMS and emergency response ecosystem. By bringing together diverse perspectives and experiences, this collaboration delivers real value to emergency response teams, strengthening skills, knowledge, and networks that are vital for effective prehospital and emergency care."

About The College of Emergency Physicians (CEP)

www.ams.edu.sg/colleges/emergency-physicians/home

The College of Emergency Physicians (CEP), Singapore, founded in 2007 under the Academy of Medicine, Singapore, is the professional body representing emergency medicine specialists and is dedicated to advancing clinical standards, education, research, and professional development in emergency care. Within the College, the Section of EMS Physicians (SEMSP), established in 2023, focuses on prehospital and emergency medical services (EMS), aiming to formalise accreditation of EMS physicians, support leadership roles such as medical directors, and strengthen system integration through advocacy, advisory work, and collaboration with national agencies. Together, they promote excellence across the continuum of emergency care—from prehospital response to the emergency department—while supporting innovation, training, and regional engagement.
