From the heart of Scotland

“Daiglen of Scotland nestles at the foot of the Ochil Hills in the quiet village of Tillicoultry, Clackmannanshire – the very heart of Scotland.

The two-storey building was originally built in 1846 and was the dwelling house of Mr Archibald of Archibald Mills, the then owner of Tillicoultry Woollen Mill. The association with Textiles and textile manufacture has persisted to this day.

Daiglen supports both domestic and international markets, offering a touch of Scotland with its range of traditional hand-made kilts

The Pride of Scotland collection complements and adds to the offering, including various Highlandwear jacket styles as well as highlandwear accessories and Scottish giftware.

The Pride of Scotland range was created to meet demand around the world In particular for those individuals who did not have by virtue of surname, or geographical location, a direct association with a tartan they could call their own. The Pride of Scotland Tartans became the perfect choice for all individuals with desires to associate with Scotland and all things Scottish.

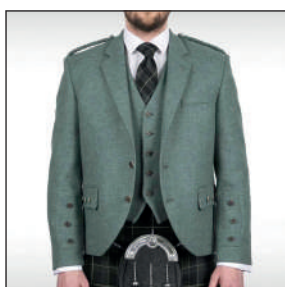

Our collection includes Jackets & Waistcoats, ideal for any contemporary or traditional look or occasion, including Crail & Argyll, Prince Charlie, Edwardian and Contemporary styles.

A range of complementary accessories completes the collection.”

Daiglen of Scotland Hand & Hybrid Made Kilts

Here at Daiglen of Scotland, we offer kilts made in three different ways:
Handmade or Hybrid Made.

Handmade Kilts are as it sounds, it is fully made by hand while Hybrid Kilts are made using a combination of both Handmade & Machine Made techniques.

The pleats in the Hybrid are machine sewn in from behind which means that the stitching is not visible and comparable in look to a hand sewn. The waistband fabric is partially attached to the kilt with a hidden stitch, you then attach the lining to the waistband fabric, which is then folded over and sewn in to create the finished waistband, again all with hidden stitching.

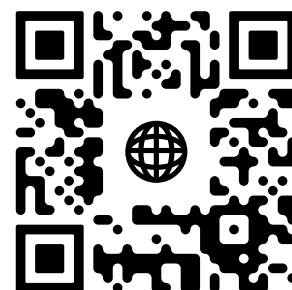

Everything else is done by hand in the same way a handmade kilt would be. The Daiglen hybrid kilt, offers an excellent variant to the handmade kilt, with the finished product looking and wearing every bit as stylish and comfortable.

Within these 3 ways to make kilts, we also offer a variety of customisable options on each kilt such as different pleating methods. These are listed below.

As well as adult kilts, we also offer made to measure children's kilts.
