The programme is designed to move beyond theory and focus on the practical barriers, opportunities and models needed to deliver personalised care more effectively and equitably.

Attending will help me:

- Learn from real-world precision medicine integration models covering equity, governance, reimbursement and regulation
- Benchmark our approach against leading research and emerging strategies across academia, industry and policy
- Network with the full precision medicine community in one place, creating opportunities for collaboration, knowledge exchange, future partnerships and insight into where the sector is moving.
- Engage with Nature Portfolio editors to better understand research priorities and publication standards
- Advance my career progression by participating in Nature Masterclasses and career-focused sessions designed to strengthen skills such as research communication, poster presentation, professional profile building and career progression

By attending, I will return with actionable insights, relevant contacts and a stronger understanding of how innovation in precision medicine can be translated into measurable impact.
