For the first time in the history of the World Petroleum Congresses, an exposition on clean technologies will be showcased at the 24th edition of the event in Calgary, Canada this September from 17-21, 2023. Tying in with the theme 'Energy Transition: The Path to Net Zero' the exposition will include a dedicated exhibition hall, theatre and a knowledge-sharing café to clean technologies known as the Carbon Tech Expo (CTX).

On the path to net-zero many organizations will need to employ clean technologies to hit their emissions targets. To highlight this important key sector, the 24th WPC Congress structure will include an exposition dedicated to clean technologies at all stages of development, within the private, public, and academic spheres. The Carbon Tech Expo will provide a platform whereby businesses, governments, and academia can showcase their ideas, prototypes, or commercial products. The 24th Congress will be the first Congress to host a Carbon Tech Expo (CTX).

Located in Hall C of the BMO center in high-traffic areas, the CTX will be approximately 10,000 ft². The Expo will provide an opportunity for companies and individuals to exchange thoughts and innovations and network with others in the cleantech business, as well as discuss potential business development ideas with energy companies, delegates, and other exhibitors.
