

Comms that win confidence

AntiroMedia is a specialist media agency led by a highly skilled and experienced team of senior media practitioners and industry experts. We specialise in carefully delivering the right message in the right way to engage your workforce and other key stakeholders effectively on the business critical areas of environment, health and safety (EHS).

With technical accuracy, the message is tailored to each audience to cut through and achieve the required impact.

Whether it's training, internal comms, PR or technical guides, AntiroMedia can help you enhance your credibility as a well run business that is well and truly a force for good.

Your team

Communicate effectively with your employees and contractors on matters of business critical importance, from regulatory compliance to technical updates. Ensuring every link in your supply and value chains is strong.

Your stakeholders

Make an excellent impression and deliver assurance to the people who matter, from investors to regulators. As experts in technical comms, we can interpret and communicate complex issues to every audience.

Your next customers

We'll help you win business. Nailing the pre-qualification for tenders when regulatory compliance and technical brilliance is essential. Getting the finer details right in your pitch showcases your competence.

Our highly experienced and talented team of EHS communications specialists work in tandem with our technical partners and your people to craft comms that meet your strategic aims, to budget, on time and to the highest possible standards.
